Night Sky Spiral II, 2003

Ana England (b.1953)

United States (Cincinnati)

Ceramic, wax

Museum Purchase: Lawrence Archer Wachs Trust

According to the artist, "Night Sky Spiral II explores the beauty of the cosmos and the dynamic spiral movement of the galaxies." The forty-three black ceramic disks that constitute this work were created by a complex process that involved two firings. The second was a raku firing, during which the clay discs were reheated to a high temperature and then immediately enclosed in sand and sawdust nests to cool. As the disks slowly cooled, the atmosphere in the virtually airtight nests reached with the surface of the clay and turned it black. The discs were then covered with synthetic wax producing a soft, luminous sheen.

The artist resides in Cincinnati and is a professor at Northern Kentucky University.
