FAMILY DISCUSSION GUIDE

Welcome to Kara Walker: Cut to the Quick at the Cincinnati Art Museum. Walker's work is both beautiful and challenging. It encourages viewers to take a critical and haunting view of the past while proposing questions around the challenges we continue to face collectively today. Her work requires deep looking, reflection and contemplation.

This Family Discussion Guide is intended to help you explore the exhibition. It provides questions and conversation prompts to help you talk about what you are seeing, thinking, and feeling. Grown-ups visiting this exhibition with children are encouraged to discuss the themes captured in Walker's work.

As you make your way through the exhibition, allow your child to take the lead. Encourage them to stop at artworks that catch their eye. Some works may make either or both of you uncomfortable to view and discuss. We encourage you to lean into that discomfort and talk about how you are feeling while viewing the exhibition.

Try using these questions to get the conversation going

- Why did this artwork catch your attention? What do you see when you look at it?
- What does this artwork make you wonder about? How does it make you feel?
- What questions do you have about this artwork?
- What do you think the artist is trying to tell us with this artwork?
 Is it okay not to know the answers?
- People say that you can read artworks like you read a book.
 If you read Kara Walker's artworks like a story, what do you think the story would be?
 Where do you think the story begins?

We understand that the works on view are complex, challenging, and possibly triggering. If your family needs a break while exploring, we invite you to visit our Community Care Space. Located in the exhibition, please use this space to rest, reflect and reset.
